Father DARKLEAF'S Column

We name a local hero. Full many a dead of worth is done to pass unnoticed, but this one is at least noticed. Last Wednesday a party from Appomattox went to Norfolk to see the Ford exposition. On the Norfolk-Potomac ferry, J. J. Van Houten, a local hero, was on duty. He was a man of about 40 years of age, with a friendly smile and a kind heart. He was a man of about 40 years of age, with a friendly smile and a kind heart.

We are always wondering who will win next. It remained for Bill and Billy Ould and Robert Allen to provide the attraction. They were snared and captured a week. It is in for display. It was a 12 inch turtle just outside town and it was even in the display. It was a 12 inch turtle just outside town and it was even in the display.

Members of the church have sacrificed to achieve this fine result. Much credit is due Mrs. Ould for their efforts and members of the church declare that they won't stop until a new building replaces the present frame structure.

Answers Queries on Position

The eagle of death moves swiftly. Tuesday morning of this week, death entered one of Appomattox's best families and swiftly regarding my attitude on the so called Kerr Bill, I will vote for this bill.

I am opposed to giving arbitrary power to the Secretary of Agriculture, but in this instance a large majority of the tobacco growers consent before the provisions of the bill can be a limited period. The bill is also for a limited period.

I do not think, however, that this bill will save the tobacco industry. I think the tobacco must be largely decreased in order to increase consumption. I then think we must improve the quality of the tobacco.

I am deeply interested in the improvement of the tobacco industry and I am sure that the provisions of the bill approved by a majority of the tobacco growers will be of great benefit to the industry.
